The adage that project management is both science and art is true. Project manager (PM) effectiveness hinges on the "right" combination of experience, knowledge, leadership, and soft skills. Team effectiveness is an outgrowth of PM effectiveness. How well a PM creates and develops his or her team, and leads the project to successful execution, directly relates to this "right" combination.

“You can't set goals for every leadership competency you want to develop. Narrow your goals to those that you feel passionate about, those that benefit you or can reduce mistakes, and those that are not too difficult to achieve but still stretch your abilities” (Scisco, Biech, & Hallenbeck, 2017, p. 349).
