Human Rights Based Approaches to Development

The adoption of rights-based approaches (RBAs) in development work – that is, approaches that are informed and guided by the framework of international human rights law, and the values that underpin it – has had a significant impact on the ways in which development agencies operate. RBAs emphasise the centrality of power relations, and the core principles of participation, accountability and non-discrimination.

A rights-based approach to development is one that positions the human rights of a community as central to the development of that community. This is in stark contrast to previous 'charity' or 'needs' frameworks, which positioned community members as passive receivers of goods and services (Boesen & Martin 2007, p. 10, UNICEF 2003).
